

I was a passenger in my boyfriend's car, and was injured in a collision caused by him.
Can I claim?

We often handle cases just like your own, many of our clients feel they are unable to make a claim because their partner was at fault or caused the collision and are worried about the reaction their partners may have to a claim against them. Your boyfriend has paid for car insurance so that his passengers can make a claim against him if appropriate. If the collision was his fault he will already have put his no claims bonus at risk. A claim by you will not cost him anything extra. You will not be causing him any more trouble by making a claim!